

The FCC should use New Jersey's Do Not Call legislation as a model. By attempting to overturn the state's right to enact such legislation, you are admitting that the FCC's legislation is substandard. Federal agencies should not necessarily have the right to overturn state legislation. It challenges the integrity of the state's lawmakers and sets a poor tone for our legislative system.